Synopsis: UNSCHOOLED follows the journey of three inner city high school students in North Philadelphia as they embark on a radical journey to direct their own education at Natural Creativity Center. What happens when children have the power to decide what and how they learn?

Unschooled The Movement: On March 11th, the film's impact campaign will host a full day of programming, including an encore screening, to dive into core themes, including conversations centered on self-directed education and the importance of creating a pathway to equity and accessibility for all. View media advisory for details.
